

Journey to the Delphi Oracle

Incredible lessons to be learnt not only in life but in journeys as well. I feel as excited as a child going to an ice cream shop to get her favorite ice cream and toppings on a mid summers day every time a class comes around. The anticipation of what class will bring, fun escapades to lands far beyond our day to day imaginations and discussions and healings from amazing masters of long years before. Tonight's journey was to Delphi, Greece to visit the oracles of the temple and receive a healing from the God. We started in our usual meditative, grounding and running energy and working to see if we were in our present time of life breaking any rules that either we set up for ourselves or society set up for us to believe subconsciously were rules. Coming out of that meditation and moving straight into our journey was very exciting and as we started our journey I was very focused as the journey would be led a little differently than our usual traveling on clouds or other heavenly forms of transportation, tonight we walked a moving sidewalk and counted our way into trance, superb to say the least except that once going into trance everything became a blur, it was as if I had traveled into unconsciousness and was fighting my way back to reality. I could hear our instructor but was completely oblivious to her commands although I knew energetically I was performing what I had to at her guidance but it was as if the entire journey to a point had fallen off the radar to never be seen again, I recall becoming aware at a point where we had met a third oracle/Diva and communicating with her, to what extent I also cannot recall but when it came time to meet the God a light bulb clicked and I remembered seeing a man, shorter than I had expected as reference is made to his strength and power, he emanated a very bright and broad white light and I could see his hands in the air and his body, his face blank as the rest of him as much as I kept staring too see into his eyes or face I could not. He offered me a massive healing which involved my third eye; I could feel immense pressure in the third eye area as I watched him pull a long veil/fabric from the area. His words echoed to tell me that he was clearing my vision so that I may see more clearly, he then sent an overall healing and advised that we would meet in the astral a couple nights later. It was to my surprise that I had received a similar experience to my classmate and after reading each other and chatting we realized perhaps we had similar issues to work through. Our fears and experience very similar which of course without a doubt the universe had placed us simultaneously in the same class to work together on them.
